Hello, I have never sent a letter like this before. I would have never thought it would be necessary.

I used to be a fan of Microsoft, I thought they represented the American dream. i.e.

A group of young entrepreneurs changing the world for the better and getting rich in the process.

Having watched their business practices over the years, and now working in the computer industry, I have a completely different view of Microsoft. They are predators that feel that they are above the law. If any other industry behaved in such a fashion there would be a public outcry.

Computer operating systems are harder for most to understand.

(If one company owned 95% of the petroleum distribution centers in our country, then started a car company and changed all the fueling nozzles to only fit their car it would not be tolerated)

They do not even seem to have learned by this latest litigation, they seem even more arrogant than usual.

Fair competition is good for our economy and society, abusing a monopoly to stifle competition is not

Thank you for time

Hank Henry
